

Jo Beadle

GIVIT National Manager

Jo Beadle is a disaster recovery specialist with more than twenty years experience in community recovery and resilience.

As National Manager at GIVIT, Jo leads the national and state engagement teams. In this role, Jo manages federal, state and local government relationships as well as key government agencies and disaster recovery providers. She is also responsible for recruiting and supporting charities in preparation for disaster events and raising the profile of GIVIT's Disaster Recovery Service amongst individual and corporate donors.

She has held previous roles with the Queensland Reconstruction Authority, Ipswich City Council and Queensland Department of Local Government, Community Recovery and Resilience. Prior to this, Jo had an extensive career in the Royal Australian Navy which included multiple humanitarian assistance and disaster relief operations. Jo holds a Bachelors Degree in Emergency Management from Charles Sturt University.

About GIVIT

GIVIT is a not-for-profit donation platform that works with more than 4,600 support organisations around Australia to ensure vulnerable people get what they need when they need it most. This includes people recovering from an emergency event, or experiencing hardship due to circumstances such as drought, domestic and family violence, homelessness, disability, and mental health.

Through GIVIT.org.au, offers of goods and services are captured online, removing the need for charities and services to sort, store and dispose of unrequested donations, saving valuable resources. 100% of donated money received by GIVIT to support people in need are used to purchase essential items and services.
